OUR DAILY INSPIRATION

For the enviable employees working at ValleyCrest's corporate headquarters, every day is a walk in the park. Encompassing three acres on a panoramic site overlooking the San Fernando Valley in Calabasas, California, the campus is a garden of timeless beauty—and an inspiring showcase of what we're capable of achieving.

Designed by our own preeminent landscape architect Jim Hyatt, ASLA, and ValleyCrest CEO Burton Sperber, FASLA, the landscape boasts plantings of European white birch, California sycamores, coastal live oaks, evergreens, bamboo and palms, as well as distinctive features including a Zen garden, cactus displays and Japanese fountains. Weaving environmental granite and brick elements and plant material into the site's natural topography, the beautiful walking gardens and public spaces complement the sophisticated 80,000-square-foot concrete, glass and stainless-steel building.

Soaring three stories high is the lobby atrium. Within this sunlit botanical garden, lobby visitors recline on comfortable chairs amidst fragrant flowering plants, towering tree ferns and mature Kentia palms over water gardens and koi ponds.

We're proud to provide our employees a tranquil and relaxing place to come to work every day.
